HISTORY OF HIGHLAND LAWN BELL TOWER

A special session was called by the Board on September 4th, 1894, present were: J. S. Beach, W. T. Beaucamp, G. E. Farrington, and William Mack. W. R. McKeen and R. W. Thompson were absent. The chair being occupied by Mayor Fred A. Ross.

The plans submitted by the Chicago Architect Paul S. Lietz for the gateway were adopted. Mr. Lietz's proposition was that the Board furnish transportation to and from Cincinnati and that he receive 5% of the cost of the construction for his plans and supervision. This was accepted.

Bids for construction were as follows:

Clover & Hill	$7054.00
J. W. Miller & Son	7017.00
E. W. Chadwick	6742.00
The Heidenreich Company	6500.00

The bid was awarded to the Heidenreich Company on September 27th with the construction to be completed by December 1894. The Heidenreich Company contracted Edward Hazledine to make the wrought iron entry gates. The stone work was done by the Terre Haute Stone Company.

The entrance consists of a circular tower containing a lodge, a semi-circle arch for a gateway, and a waiting room, together with iron fences and stone fence posts for approaches. The foundation is of limestone; the body of the entire structure of buff Bedford stone.

The fence heading to the gateway is of wrought iron with stone piers at given intervals. The letters "Highland Lawn" in one side of the main arch are made of wrought iron in rustic design.

The gates leading to the main avenue are eighteen feet wide. Smaller gates at each side are four feet wide.

The waiting room in the large arch had a concrete floor, and was used for a carriage entrance whenever desired. Handsome lamps were placed beneath the arch.

The roof was of slate, and the towers capped with tiling. The gate is located 160 feet up the main avenue from the old fence, making it 200 feet from the center of the National road. The handsome iron fence curves east and west until it reaches the present fence line, and the approach is laid out in a handsome manner.

The frontage of the entire structure is 72 feet. The main tower is 60 feet in height. The clock shown was omitted.

CHAPEL DEDICATION

APRIL 5, 1988

HISTORY OF THE HIGHLAND LAWN CHAPEL

The Chapel is situated on the crest of a high hill commanding a view of the entire surrounding country.

The Chapel was beautifully designed by Architect Jesse A. Vrydaugh. It is a very skillful and fine example of "Richardsonian Romanesque" architecture popular from the early 1870's to 1900. This style is characterized by the use of simple building shapes in dominant compositional themes and particular techniques in the use of rugged masonry materials.

The plan of the building is a simple cruciform popular for many chapels with exterior forms being simple shapes. The main body is a massive square with a pyramidal roof rising over it, and three gable roof projections protruding from the main mass with a round apse on the rear. The mass is further articulated by a round bell tower with a stone domical roof inserted on the corner of the main square and a round chimney tower inserted on another corner of the main square.

The interior plan is derived from a simple church cruciform pattern, but adapted to the needs of a cemetery chapel. The round apse is the crypt room. There are receptacles for six coffins, this is a shut off from the chapel by large double doors.

The windows were all stained glass. The east and west walls had large round windows in beautiful designs while smaller ones furnished an abundance of light.

The building was heated with a hot air coal furnace in the basement. The basement has a domed brick ceiling. The actual building was built around the basement after the furnace was installed.

Architect Vrydaugh was commissioned in October of 1892 to design the Chapel, it was finished in November of 1893 at the cost of $10,000.00.

The Chapel was used for funeral services for approximately 75 years by the City of Terre Haute. Historically it is one of the few such structures of its type remaining in the Midwest today.

Renovation of the Chapel began in June 1987 and was completed in March 1988 at the cost of $65,000.00.

The City of Terre Haute can once again be proud of the Highland Lawn Chapel.

HISTORY OF THE HIGHLAND LAWN CEMETERY

Highland Lawn Cemetery, a municipal burying ground, is recognized as one of the most beautiful cemeteries in the country, and the second largest in the state of Indiana.

A beautiful piece of rolling land on 138 acres, the land was purchased on March 13, 1884 from Ray G. and Grace Jenckes. The purchase price was $15,000.00.

The Jenckes family graves are marked by the family monument which also stands for the location of the Jenckes house which stood in the cemetery. The house was built in the early 1820's and was tore down in 1911.

One of the striking features of the Cemetery, is the Bell Tower at the entrance, by the architectural conception of Paul S. Lietz of Chicago. The Bell Tower is constructed of Bedford Stone.

A Rest House was built attached to the gate. This was built in accordance with the general scheme of the gate and is considered an architectural gem. It is the design of W.H. Floyd of Terre Haute.

Another feature, of the Cemetery, is the old Trolley Car Waiting Station built in the early 1920's, which has now been converted into the office.

The Cemetery is a burial ground for many prominent and famous people, such as: Chapman J. Root, Founder of the Coca Cola Bottle, Max Ehrmann, poet and writer, Daniel Voorhees, United States Senator, Sheldon Swope, Founder of the Swope Art Gallery, this is only to name a few.

The Cemetery contains many walk-in Mausoleums, as well as many unusual monuments and stones, such as the Collett-Fairbanks Monument which stands 30 feet high and weighs 20 tons, constructed out of granite stone.

Located in Section 9, of the Cemetery, is Soldiers and Sailors Circle. There are approximately 684 burials from Veterans of the Civil War, Spanish-American War, World War I, World War II, Korean War and Vietnam War. Also, buried there is a Revolutionary War Veteran. A ten ton cannon sits atop of the hill, on the circle, placed there at the turn of the 20th century.

Each year on Memorial Day, a service and dedication is held to honor Veterans by the various Veteran Groups of Vigo County.

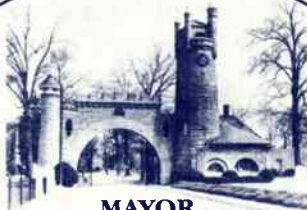

Many new graves have been platted and the Board of Cemetery Regents have estimated there are burial spaces for the next ninety years.

OPEN HOUSE

May 19, 1991

HISTORY OF THE HIGHLAND LAWN CEMETERY

The National Register of Historic Places is the Nation's official list of cultural resources worthy of preservation. The Highland Lawn Cemetery is now one of the sixteen properties listed in Vigo County and the second cemetery in the State of Indiana to be accepted to the Register.

The Highland Lawn Cemetery is an outstanding example of late 19th Century Romantic (Victorian) landscape design. It is also significant for its Romanesque architecture.

Contained on the 138 acres is a Romanesque Revival entrance gate with a Bell Tower which was used as the original office and chapel, a classical revival building which was built for the interurban waiting room (now the Cemetery office), maintenance garage, storage barns, caretaker's residence, and twenty-six plotted burial sections.

Designed in 1884 by Joseph Earnshaw, Highland Lawn exhibits the typical characteristics and details of Romantic landscapes; graceful, meandering paths, extensive plantings and grouping of trees and shrubs, and the selective placement of lakes, vistas, and open spaces. Earnshaw's design concept for the Cemetery was the "lawn plan" in which existing landscape took precedence over the erection of large monuments. The Cemetery also contains a number of remarkable examples of sepulcher architecture and sculpture that reflect the 19th century use of funerary art as a demonstration of social standing. Today much of the original landscape design remains in tact and is well respected and maintained by the City of Terre Haute. The original plan can be seen in the Bell Tower.

Mausoleums and obelisks are the most distinctive structures one sees when visiting the Cemetery. Many of the mausoleums contain stained glass windows. Statuary headstones throughout the Cemetery are sculpted in a variety of forms. The sleeping and waking lions are said to be the finest in this part of the country.

Highland Lawn Cemetery contains so much of Vigo County history, tours are conducted for groups by appointment.

Vigo County is noted for several other firsts such as Dr. Frank Wiedmann who developed the first x-ray in the United States. Ellen Church Marshall was the first airline stewardess, she was also the first woman to receive the Air Medal, EAME Campaign medal with seven bronze stars and the Victory Medal. Virginia Ellis Jenckes, the first woman elected to Congress just 12 years after women received the right to vote. Colonel Thompson as Secretary of the Navy during President Hayes Administration was the first to send American warships to Korea to open trade with that country.

Funeral trains were a part of special services provided by Terre Haute, Indianapolis and Eastern Traction Company. Jacob Orth was the first body brought to Highland Lawn by the interurban in February 1908.

The National Register of Historic Places is the official inventory of sites with national, state, or local significance in the development of our nation's historic, architectural, archaeological, or cultural heritage. Listing on the National Register is official recognition of the significance of the site and provides a measure of protection for the property.

In Indiana the National Register program is administered by the Department of Natural Resources.

A special thanks to the Director of Natural Resources, Patrick R. Ralston and his staff, for their assistance in receiving this honor.

And a special thanks to Terre Haute First National Bank for the refreshments.

Highland Lawn chapel rededication set today

A chapel having the charm of a medieval English church has been restored on the grounds of Highland Lawn Cemetery and will be available for use following dedication ceremonies today.

The chapel of Richardsonian Romanesque architecture was designed by Jesse A. Vrydaugh and built in 1893 at a cost of $10,000, furnished. It has, as near as possible, been restored to its original simple splendor through the efforts of many firms and individuals in the Terre Haute area.

Even the apse to the side of the main floor, where coffins were stored in early times until the ground thawed enough to dig graves, was restored to its original dimensions.

The basement's domed ceiling is one of the last examples of that architecture left in the state. The chapel sits atop the highest hill in the cemetery and offers a magnificent view of the Wabash River Valley and the bluffs on the west side of the river.

Cash and labor donations contributed to a pool of $65,000 that was needed to restore the building. Two of the first donors were Lawton-Byrum Post 972 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and Terre Haute First National Bank, which gave the largest single donation, $5,000.

Patrick Ralston, superintendent of the Terre Haute Parks and Recreation Department, said he was appalled by the appearance of the chapel when he first saw it. "I was simply embarrassed, and I thought at the time that we simply had to do something about the deplorable condition the chapel was in."

Ralston said that donations are still coming in and any surplus funds will be placed in a chapel fund to maintain the building.

Highland Lawn

studies in baroque contrasts. One sees structures which say they are miniature dwelling places, down to their doors, windows and pitched roofs.

On the other hand, the Blumberg mausoleum, in the cemetery's section 21, looks, with its Greek-motif columns and vigilant lion guards, every bit like the tomb it is.

Not too far away stands the Carter-Vanscoyoc mausoleum, impressive in its unadorned solidity, suggesting that perhaps the best way to confront eternity is with geometrical strength. Then, too, a walk around the grounds discovers any number of towering limestone thrusts that, like the Pierson obelisk that is at least 30 feet high, seem to stretch towards the presumed source of all answers.

Many markers in Highland Lawn are true monuments to the personalities they memorialize, bearing witness to the accomplishments and reputations of the deceased.

Consider the large monument to Dr. Frank Wiedmann, a prominent Terre Haute physician who developed the first X-ray apparatus in the United States. Wiedmann was an inveterate world traveler, a point made by the giant globe that marks his final earthly destination. John Robert Craig died in an Indianapolis hotel bed; an exercise in macabre logic, his gravesite is a bedstead — head, foot and all.

Or there's the unique marble slab which marks the resting place of showman Chief Bearfoot and his daughter. Chief Bearfoot — Benjamin Harrison Myers in real life — toured with Buffalo Bill, some say. His marker features a globe and stars as well as a locket-like fixture which houses the man's photo.

On the other side of the cemetery, the stone which identifies the grave of Ed Clark, a popular city taxi driver, bears the image of a — taxi cab.

Some of Highland Lawn's occupants live on through interesting anecdotes about their monuments or legends, sometimes tales not entirely of their own making.

Eugene V. Debs is not buried beneath the grand monument which bears his name; instead, his remains were interred under a relatively simple stone not far from the cemetery entrance.

Most Terre Hauteans know the story of John L. Heintz and his dog, Stiffy Green. City Superintendent of Cemeteries Rita Kendall says that, according to the tale, "At night, you could hear a door squeak and you could hear a man and his dog." But Stiffy was in reality only a stone pet, despite lore about his shedding and all. "It's amazing what people think up," says Kendall.

Wealthy eccentric Martin Alonzo Sheets, Kendall points out, apparently lived in fear of being buried alive. So, he supposedly had a telephone installed in his mausoleum so he could call if things went sour — along with a bottle of whiskey to enjoy while he was waiting for help. Kendall discounts the rumors of the whiskey, but she says a telephone repairman did tell her there was what could have been an old phone outlet in the vault. "I was told the phone company took out the phone during World War II," Kendall adds; "Course, I thought it was because he didn't pay his bill."

Thy fibres net the dreamless head,

Thy roots are wrapt about the bones.

The seasons bring the flower again,

And bring the firstling to the flock;

And in the dusk of thee, the clock

Beats out the little lives of men.

— Alfred, Lord Tennyson, "In Memoriam"

It is not surprising that quite a few monuments and stones in Highland Lawn Cemetery bear religious motifs — angels, crosses, Stars of David, even faces of Christ. The Casey monument depicts an image of the Pearly Gates themselves. But we might wonder why so many stones are carved with floral decor — ivy, what appear to be ears of grain, lilies. Some tombs are topped by planters, where perennial vegetation of one sort or another returns every year, an expression — like their etched-in-stone botanical equivalents — of the idea that life is not a straight line but an unbroken cycle.

Marble figures in attitudes of meditation ponder the significance of it all; elsewhere, as on the Rood-Chicsaw family plot, the opportunity for reflection beckons to us too, in the form of modest stone benches. Atop the F.A. Wey stone stands a figure that seems to contemplate a journey, caught however in midstride.

But, in a way, the most touching markers in the cemetery are those which are much more modest in appearance, those which don't tell us too much any more about the lives they represent. It could be that not everyone who passes on cares what we think; or it may be that some families simply can't afford elaborate tributes to those who have gone on before.

One William Wakely's terrestrial presence, for instance, is commemorated only by the "Not Forgotten" engraved on his stone, a statement that is moving in its directness. Several plots are marked by stones which explain nothing more than that the deceased is "At Rest," and there are quite a few spots in the cemetery where we find homemade markers, similar to the cast-concrete Maltese cross in section 13. The marker's handwritten script is all but illegible now, delivering the cryptic message, "E. . . RCIA 22 1928."

Time plays other nasty tricks. The only known local grave of a Revolutionary War veteran, according to Rita Kendall, is now to be found on what came to be Hulman Links golf course. Folks who care to delay hitting away from the number five tee or putting out on the 15th green might take a look around them.

Enclosed by a chainlink fence is a mostly overgrown small cemetery; on the edge of the plot is the headstone (obviously a 19th century replacement item) of Walter Dickerson, "Hutchins' N.J. Troops, Rev. War." That's it. No rocket's red glare, no "Don't Tread On Me," no drum-and-bugle corps.

Anonymity in its starkest sense, of course, is to be found on Highland Lawn's Soldiers Circle, a tree-sheltered hill which is home to 721 burial sites — graves of veterans of almost all American wars, Spanish-American, Civil, world wars I and II and so on. Near the front row of white stones, at the crest of the ridge, two soldiers who fought the Civil War now lie side by side. We'll never know just who they are, or how they died, or what they could have told us; they are registered as "Unknown U.S. Soldier," nothing more, nothing less, somehow the very essence of their service and sacrifice.

Because Kendall approaches her job with what seems to be an appropriate mix of respect and humor, one would think the city's cemeteries are in good hands. Recently, she and her grounds crew were readying Highland Lawn for a May 19 open house, in celebration of the cemetery's entry in the National Register of Historic Places, and she is ever-alert to the esthetic and affecting dimensions of the place.

Still, Kendall delights in telling about the different ways in which we look at death and where it will take us. She remembers the man who came into her office to inquire about a plot purchase and said he wanted to be buried in the "No Smoking section of the cemetery."

There was the woman who asked about a single plot. Kendall said of course that there were single plots in Highland Lawn, but the woman had another kind of single-ness in mind. "You don't have married people there, do you?" she said.

Kendall recalls days when cemeteries were perhaps regarded with a lack of awe that might seem curious to some. "I remember," she says, "when I was a little girl, the families would go out on Memorial Day, decorate the graves and picnic on the cemetery grounds."

A healthy attitude, one might say. Martin Alonzo Sheets would certainly approve.

Gravestone recalls the world travels of prominent physician

By Dave Delaney T s MAY 25 1987
Tribune-Star Staff Reporter

When most of us leave this world, we like to mark the fact that we have been here.

Dr. Frank Wiedemann was a prominent Terre Haute physician who traveled the world and wanted to be remembered that way.

A dozen years before his death in 1961, he and his wife decided to pick out the stone that would mark their remains forever. What they chose for the family plot at Highland Lawn Cemetery is a unique stone featuring a large globe of the world.

"We've taken trips around the world several times," said his widow Leah Wiedemann. She said the globe represents her husband's worldwide quest for knowledge.

Another telling symbol on the grave is a caduceus, the winged, snake-entwined symbol of the medical profession. Wiedemann, who died at age 89, was once featured in Life Magazine for having developed the first X-ray in the United States.

Within 100 yards of the Wiedemann grave is the elaborate marker of the Ehrmann family of Terre Haute. Buried there is famed poet Max Ehrmann, who wrote the poem "Desiderata." The poet died in 1945.

The first line of Ehrmann's 1927 poem could describe what visitors to his grave might encounter: "Go placidly amid the noise and haste and remember what peace there may be in silence."

The family marker consists of a massive stone topped with a large angel. Behind the angel is a 6-foot high cross.

Steve Farnsworth, of Terre Haute Monument at 4247 Wabash Ave., said the era of large and costly family monuments is long gone.

"We're a mobile society today," explained Farnsworth, "people don't buy large, family lots and markers anymore." He said those once-popular plots with the large markers would hold about 12 to 24 graves.

Memorial services planned at Highland Lawn Cemetery

Memorial services will be conducted at 11 a.m. today at the Soldiers and Sailors Circle in Highland Lawn Cemetery, said Robert Hopewell, this year's general chairman.

Brief services will also be conducted at the Woodlawn Cemetery at 9 a.m., as well as at Calvary Cemetery around 12:30 p.m. or soon after the services on the circle.

Thomas Gregory, past post and district American Legion Commander, will serve as master of ceremonies at Highland Lawn. The ceremony will include a pledge to the flag, the Gettysburg address, the raising of colors and an honor guard.

A Memorial Day message will be delivered by the Indiana Department commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The public is invited to the ceremonies, as well as relatives of war veterans who have died.

"They'd also be very expensive to make today," said Farnsworth, who estimated the large markers such as Ehrmann's would now cost $50,000 on up to make. He said today a couple generally makes arrangements for a marker on their double grave and that the average cost is $1,500. "It's likely that their children will be buried elsewhere," he explained.

Farnsworth also said the globe the Wiedemanns bought would probably cost about $15,000 to $20,000 to duplicate today.

Highland Lawn Cemetery is also the final resting place of five-term Terre Haute Mayor Ralph Tucker, who was raised in Rose Home orphanage. A stone angel — taken from the former Rose Home at Wabash Avenue and 25th Street — is atop Tucker's gravestone.

Carved in stone on the reverse side of the angel are the words: "This angel watched over all the children of the Rose Home."

Another marker at the eastside cemetery is a full-size elk carved in stone. A number of gravestones of Elks Club members are in the plot, called Elk Rest for B.P.O.E. Lodge No. 86.

Another big monument at Highland Lawn Cemetery is a tribute to the Debs family, including labor activist and presidential candidate Eugene. A full-size stone statue of a woman holding a wreath stands atop the monument.

In Woodlawn Cemetery at 1230 N. Third St. are a number of grave markers in the form of tree stumps.

"There are no two tree stump markers alike," said cemetery employee Norman Loudermilk. "The stone cutter who made them was a real artist."

Bell tower anniversary will be observed

By Marylee Hagan

Special to the Tribune-Star

On Sept. 4, 1894, a special session of the board of regents for Highland Lawn Cemetery was conducted to adopt plans for a bell tower and gateway to be constructed at the cemetery entrance.

The plans had been submitted by Chicago architect Paul S. Lietz. A bid of $6,500 was accepted from the Heidenreich Co. which contracted Edward Hazledine to make the wrought-iron entry gates. The stonework was done by the Terre Haute Stone Co. Construction was begun Sept. 24, 1894, and completed in December of that same year.

The entrance consists of a circular tower containing a lodge, a semicircle arch for a gateway, and a waiting room, together with iron fences and stone fence posts for approaches.

In honor of the 100th anniversary of the construction of the bell tower and gateway, the Vigo County Historical Society, in conjunction with the Highland Lawn board of regents, the City of Terre Haute, and the Highland Lawn Cemetery staff, has planned a celebration.

This afternoon, the public will have an opportunity to relive "An Afternoon at Highland Lawn" in the Victorian tradition. From 4 to 5 p.m. the Historical Society will present its annual "But Not Forgotten" program at selected gravesites. Costumed actors will portray the historically interesting persons buried there. From 5 to 6 p.m. an invitation is extended to picnic and socialize (as was the custom) on the grassy banks of the tranquil lake on the east side of the cemetery. So bring a picnic basket and blanket and come enjoy the musical entertainment provided during the picnic hour.

Also, the bell tower and chapel will be open to the public.

An exhibit in the bell tower will afford an opportunity to view funeral artifacts used during the Victorian era. Throughout the afternoon, a horse-drawn hearse and vintage bicycles will travel through the grounds and you can enjoy chatting with "Victorians" who will be strolling through the cemetery.

The Highland Lawn Cemetery is on the National Register of Historic Places and is one of the historic gems of our city.

The Victorian attitude saw burial grounds, not only as a place to honor those who had passed on, but also a place to visit with friends and family on an afternoon stroll or picnic.

Demand Changing From Marble to Granite For Tomb Stones.

A few years ago when the need of a new place for interment in Terre Haute became urgent, and the commissioners purchased the beautiful spot on the east of the city, there was a great deal of opposition to the move. The ground selected was so cut up by hills and hollows that it would be impossible to utilize much of it. So claimed the opposition. Then it was too far from town and to top it all off the ground was said to be so damp and soggy that the caskets would not remain in the places where they were deposited. But this feeling has long since disappeared. Highland Lawn cemetery presents today such an attractive and beautiful appearance to the eye of the visitor that it almost becomes a pleasure to anticipate such a final resting place when it comes time for one's own to mingle with the dust again. In almost five years Superintendent Bain spent his afternoons overseeing work of beautifying the cemetery and results of his labor are now becoming conspicuous. He considers the location the one now and predicts that in the future day it will be one of the most beautiful in the entire country. And this from a man who has had a wide range of experience with cemeteries in different sections of the country.

The good judgment of the commissioners is not questioned at present. The ground consists of Messrs. W. R. McKeen, John S. Bench, T. C. Boutin, Wm. T. Auchamp, Judge Wm. Mack and Col. Thompson. The ground cost in the neighborhood of $14,000 and from sales of lots the sum of $16,000 has been realized and the fund contains $10,000. You can see by this that

WE ARE DOING NICELY,"

Mr. Bain, commenting upon the fact, "The Spring Grove cemetery at Cincinnati, Ohio, which now contains some of the finest and costliest buildings and monuments in the world and has over $500,000 in its sinking fund, was for many years unable to pay its men their wages. I have documents in my possession in the shape of orders given them for the necessities of life that will verify this assertion." Mr. Bain came from Cincinnati, where he was for several years, and he knows of what he speaks. The burial ground consists of a hundred and forty acres and the entire portion has already been laid off in drive ways and avenues. On the extreme western border the Hebrews of the city have purchased a plot of ground for their own use and all of the bodies have been removed from Woodlawn and are now quite a collection of handsome headstones on the spot.

On the other end or eastern extreme of the city of the dead the colored people have a good sized tract of land laid off for their own use. The interments at Highland Lawn are now in the second of the land the sale has been good. The price of land in the cemetery varies considerably according to the location. The land bordering the avenues sells for twenty cents per square foot and the interior lots, or some distance from the avenues at sixteen cents per foot. Mr. Josephus Collett recently paid $1,550 for a beautiful plot of ground, 10,000 square feet all told. There is no paper burial ground at Highland Lawn. The territory on which the poorer people are buried is known as the "$1 lot place" and the greater majority of the interments have been here. There are over a dozen rows of graves, placed closely, about two hundred yards in length. For a full grown person the lots are four feet wide, for a smaller person they are narrower. Not a foot of ground is wasted. The most of these graves are marked only by a small wooden slab, but over a great number of them small and tasteful tomb stones have been erected.

Entering the cemetery at the main drive a gentle slope of a slight hill presents itself and the hill is already crowned by a collection of handsome monuments. The first and most attractive of these that meet the eye is the Gilbert monument, erected several years ago by Messrs. Edward and H. C. Gilbert. It consists of a beautiful cut base surmounted by a high shaft and is of Quincy granite. Altogether it is thirty-five feet high and Supt. Bain says it is the finest piece of cut stone work he has ever seen. The Mancourt and Newhart elegant granite monuments stand side by side on one of the avenues and are beautiful pieces of stone work.

A massive piece of carved Concord granite marks the spot wherein rests the mortal remains of James Black.

Mr. J. B. Lyns has erected a beautiful monument over the grave of his wife, and the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Putnam Brown have marked the last resting place of their parents by a white marble cross upon a granite base. The monument is not large but it is almost the most beautiful stone to be seen. Other fine monuments are the Darnell, Dressler and Kidder monuments and that erected by Owen Fredricks in memory of his beloved wife.

LATEST ADDITION to the cemetery is the most beautiful of all. It is the Collett and Fairbanks monument recently erected upon the plot of ground purchased by these gentlemen.

The monument is massive and elegant and, located as it is upon a natural elevation, it stands out prominently and in bold relief as one enters the cemetery. The monument is thirty feet high and is of Vermont granite. The base stone is ten feet, four inches square and alone weighs twenty tons. The stone was shipped here on a special car. The shaft is square and all of the exposed surface is highly polished. Surmounting the massive pillar of everlasting stone is a female figure holding in her hands a floral wreath. The figure is in itself eight feet tall and in design and finish is a masterpiece of workmanship. The only inscription on the monument is "Collett" on the south side of the base stone and "Fairbanks" on the north side. The monument was only completed a few weeks ago and has attracted a great many visitors to the spot. It is said to have cost over $17,000.

BEAUTIFYING THE PLACE.

"What about the claims that the ground is too wet for a cemetery?" asked the reporter of Superintendent Bain.

"All talk; idle talk" replied he energetically. "You would have to go down about thirty feet into the ground before striking water. There are quite a number of springs in the cemetery, but they are confined to a certain line and will, before many years have passed, be turned into artificial lakes. A strip of low land running through the south eastern part of the cemetery is now being altered and will soon be turned into a chain of artificial lakes, connected together and will add much to the beauty of the place. Since last fall a new road has been built through this part and there is yet a great deal of hard work to be done about the cemetery."

"Do you think the street Railway Company will build its extension to Highland Lawn?"

Not at present at least, but it will certainly be done eventually. They will probably run horse cars from the terminus of the electric line to the cemetery the same as in the past. For the benefit of the poorer classes the company will no doubt some day secure a funeral car. These cars are used in many places and do away with the expense of the hearse and carriages. The coffin is placed in the car at the nearest convenient point and the mourners and friends take a seat in the car and are quickly transported to the cemetery."

The idea of a funeral by electricity is certainly exhilarating to say the least. We will have an electrical grave digger next with a "You push the button and we do the rest" attachment.

There are fads and and monuments the same as there are in all things with which human nature has to deal. It with the end of discovering what the prevailing fashion is this line are that the reporter visited the establishment of Evinger Brothers on east Wabash avenue.

"Yes, the fashions change in this business, too," said Mr. Evinger. "The demand in Terre Haute at present seems to be for marble, but granite is slowly gaining headway and before long I expect to see a rush for this material. It is just as durable and much cheaper and is polished down so as to almost resemble marble. We use only the Vermont granite. Those reddish colored monuments in the window are of Russian granite. The stones were imported from Russia just as they are. Yes, they certainly are ahead of us in Europe. American work cannot compare as yet with European work. I cannot account for this fact unless it is the newness of the country and the newness of the stone business. There is certainly capital enough here and it will not be many years before America will stand side by side with European countries in this industry."

HIGH LAND LAWN CEMETERY TO HAVE A FINE MONUMENT.

Crawford Fairbanks and Josephus Collett Having a Magnificent Shaft

Erected in Memory of Their Dead—News About Town.

About one year ago Josephus Collett and Crawford Fairbanks purchased a finely located elliptical shaped plot of ground in Highland Lawn cemetery, containing 10,000 square feet and surrounded by one of the most beautiful avenues in the cemetery. The ground is high and possesses other superior advantages. The price paid for the lot was $1550 and Superintendent Bain, referring to the matter this morning said that in Spring Grove cemetery, Cincinnati, where he was located for many years, would not have been less than $30,000.

This lot will be the future resting place of all members of the Collett and Fairbanks families, and the remains of those who died will be removed to this beautiful location. Shortly after the purchase of this lot an order was given an eastern firm for a monument to be made and erected on the Collett-Fairbanks enclosure at Highland Lawn. From the solid heart of the great Montpelier, Vt., granite quarries was procured the material for the magnificent shaft that has been finally completed and placed.

The sub-base of the monument is a mighty monolith which weighed twenty-five tons, was hewn and polished at the quarries, sent here on a car especially constructed for it, and hauled from the freight depot to the cemetery on trucks—brought from Indianapolis for the purpose—and pulled by ten double teams, or twenty horses. The upper base of the monument or pedestal is also a monolith weighing eighteen tons. Its transportation to this city was also attended with as much necessary care as its larger companion piece. The shaft is square and gracefully tapered being about three feet nine inches at its base and properly proportioned at its summit; it is thirty feet in height. The entire monument from the ground to the apex being forty-two feet. The entire surface of the stone is magnificently polished but beyond this there is no ornamentation or inscription barring the name.

"Collet," on the south panel of the pedestal and "Fairbanks," on the north side. The monument is the most magnificent and expensive ever raised above the graves of a Terre Haute cemetery. It will endure through all time.

Scotch Ashlar Masonry Gives Beauty to Tower Annex

HIGHLAND LAWN REST HOUSE.

To maintain the artistic effect and design was the problem faced by the rest house at the entrance to the Highland Lawn cemetery. Their plan was to build a part of the original last September when they decided to build a rest house at the entrance to the Highland Lawn cemetery. Their plan was to build a part of the original last September when they decided to build a rest house at the entrance to the Highland Lawn cemetery.

W. H. Floyd was instructed to draft the blue prints.

The contract was let to the T. J. Martin company, Sixteenth street and the Vandalia railroad, and is the structure nearing completion at a cost of $1,300. The rest house is apparently an extension of the tower and is builded of Bedford stone with the Scotch ashlar masonry.

The addition is builded in an L-shape parallel to the driveway. It is 36 feet long and 19 feet wide. The floors are tile and all metal work is brass. Toilets are provided for men and women. The rest room proper will be heated with a stove.

The entire structure is patterned in the massive colonial architecture style. The veranda is one of the main objects of beauty. It is eleven feet wide and extends the full length of the addition, thirty-six feet. Pure Ionic columns, 12 inches in diameter, support the roof and add much to the beauty of the structure. The particular advantage of the rest house, aside from its architectural beauty, is the fact that it will be of much protection to visitors to the cemetery from rains. The veranda was builded wide and roomy with this particular object in view.

BEAUTIFUL NEW CHAPEL.

The $10,000 Vault and Chapel at Highland Lawn Cemetery Nearly Finished.

The new $10,000 chapel and vault at Highland Lawn cemetery, which was contracted for by the cemetery commissioners, is now nearing completion.

It is a handsome structure. The style of architecture is somewhat after the gothic, with turrets on the four corners of the main body of the building somewhat after the design of the old feudal castles. There is a wing on either side and one in the rear, which forms the vault. A beautiful portico adorns the front, which faces the south.

The chapel is situated on the crest of a high hill commanding a view of the entire surrounding country. Off to the north and east Lost creek winds its way through the hills like a great shiny serpent, passing through the cemetery at the east side, while full 100 feet below trains on the Vandalia railroad go rushing by at regular intervals. The hill on which it was built is being leveled off preparatory to sodding it and beautiful driveways are being staked off.

Entering at the front through a wide double doorway one enters the chapel. To the east side and occupying the greater portion of the east wing is a rostrum on which a beautiful altar will be placed. A catafalque will fill the space directly in front of the altar, while the center and west wing will be filled with seats for the accommodation of mourners. While the chapel appears small at first sight, investigation develops that it is amply roomy, as one hundred or more people can be seated. The building will be heated from a hot air furnace in the cellar.

The north wing of the building is the vault. This is shut off from the chapel by large double doors. There are receptacles for six coffins. These are enclosed in solid masonry and cemented. Heavy doors, beautifully finished in chestnut, form the only ornamentation in the room. Below these the wall is built up solid, but if it is found necessary to increase the number six more can easily be added. Each one is connected with a ventilator and all gases will be carried off through the turrets on either side of the building on the north wall.

The structure is built of rough blue Bedford stone with dressed white stone trimmings. The windows are all of beautiful stained glass. In the east and west walls of the chapel are large round windows in beautiful designs while smaller ones furnish an abundance of light in every part of the interior. The building will be finished in about two weeks.

Something of Terre Haute's New and Beautiful Cemetery.

A Ten Thousand Dollar Chapel a Structure to be Admired.

The Most Attractive Monuments—When the Property Was Acquired.

WITH the passage of every year Highland Lawn cemetery becomes more and more a beautiful burial ground.

It is not yet a familiar spot to the average Terre Hautean but those who have passed the attractive rustic entrance have had their senses drawn to the beauty of the place. As the visitor enters the first driveway a gentle mound dotted with tombstones and monuments, rears itself before him, with the beautiful Collett Fairbank monument as the crowning figure. The cemetery is for the most part a succession of knolls, big and little, about which the drives have been laid out in the most convenient and attractive manner. To the eastward, on a high point, stands the beautiful new chapel.

THE NEW CHAPEL.

A feature of the Highland Lawn Cemetery is the handsome new chapel which will be completed during the next month. It will cost something over $10,000 and from a mechanical and architectural standpoint it is a beauty. It stands upon a high point almost directly north from the main entrance, but far enough to the rear of the cemetery to escape the dust from the roadway. The ground in front of the building has been tastefully laid out and a driveway built, passing directly in front of the entrance. The chapel is built of handsome New Bedford stone. A massive portico extends out over the entrance. Just within the door is the chapel room. It will be large enough to seat a couple of hundred people and the aisles between the seats are laid with pretty tiling. The chancel side walls and ceiling are frescoed in a soft pink color to harmonize with the light from the beautiful cathedral glass windows. An altar in full keeping with the structure stands on the chancel. In the rear of the church is the vault room, containing six apartments, each one under separate locks. The vaults can be readily increased to number twelve in a short time. The chapel is heated by hot air from a furnace built below.

THE NEW CHAPEL.

The architects, Messrs Vrydagh & Sons, have received many compliments on the design and it will doubtless be copied in many places. The building was erected by Daniel Gardiner. Russell and Ravel did the brick work and the Terre Haute Stone Company the stone work.

Henry Glaevecke, the well-known fresco artist, decorated the church. The design was his own and reflects great credit to his ability. The coloring is subdued and beautiful and corresponds perfectly with the windows.

The construction of the chapel was not a small task by any means on account of the peculiar location. After considerable consideration a railroad switch was built to the foot of the bluff upon which the chapel now stands and the stone and other material was hoisted by means of steam engine. By this method the heavy expense of teaming the material was saved.

Uncover 76-Year-Old Ledger With Highland Lawn Records

By HOWARD STEVENS

An original record ledger which chronologically lists the first interments at Highland Lawn cemetery has been uncovered by Martha Maloof, secretary, Terre Haute Board of Public Works and Safety.

Dating back to Oct. 29, 1884, the old ledger lists the first person buried at the city-owned cemetery as Samantha McPherson. Subsequent entries carry the names of a child, Hannah McPherson, 4, who was interred on Jan. 6, 1885, and the grandfather, Alexander, 69, who was buried Jan. 29. The mother's cause of death is listed as typhoid fever; the child, croup, and the grandfather, Bright's disease.

Noting the name of the deceased, the heavily bound ledger also lists the cause of death, age, lot, section and date of interment. Two nationally known figures, Eugene Debs and Daniel Voorhees, are included among those persons interred at Highland Lawn.

Important Addition.

Described by George Boyer, cemetery superintendent, as an important addition to the cemetery's records, the ledger reads like a page out of the distant past. It takes note that dropsy, ague, La Grippe, small pox, cholera, pneumonia and flux caused many of the deaths occurring in the mid 1800's. Typhoid and scarlet fever, asthma, dysentery, and tuberculosis claimed a great number of lives, the ledger notes.

Causes of death ranged a wide field. Spinal fever, locked bowels, whooping cough, gangrene, tetanus were but a few of the diseases listed. A number of persons interned at the cemetery were listed as killed by "run-a-way horses." One man died at the age of 30 by suffering a "blow on the head with a poker." Another died of "measles and neglect," the record states.

In the minutes of a cemetery board held at the Prairie City Bank in 1894, $100 was provided for legal counsel to aid in the prosecution of a man who killed a cemetery employe. The victim's name was listed as Alexander Laurence.

On Feb. 27, 1901, Ida Finkelstein, 20, was interned. The woman, a school teacher, suffered a "wound in her head and her throat was cut." Her murderer, many will remember, was hanged.

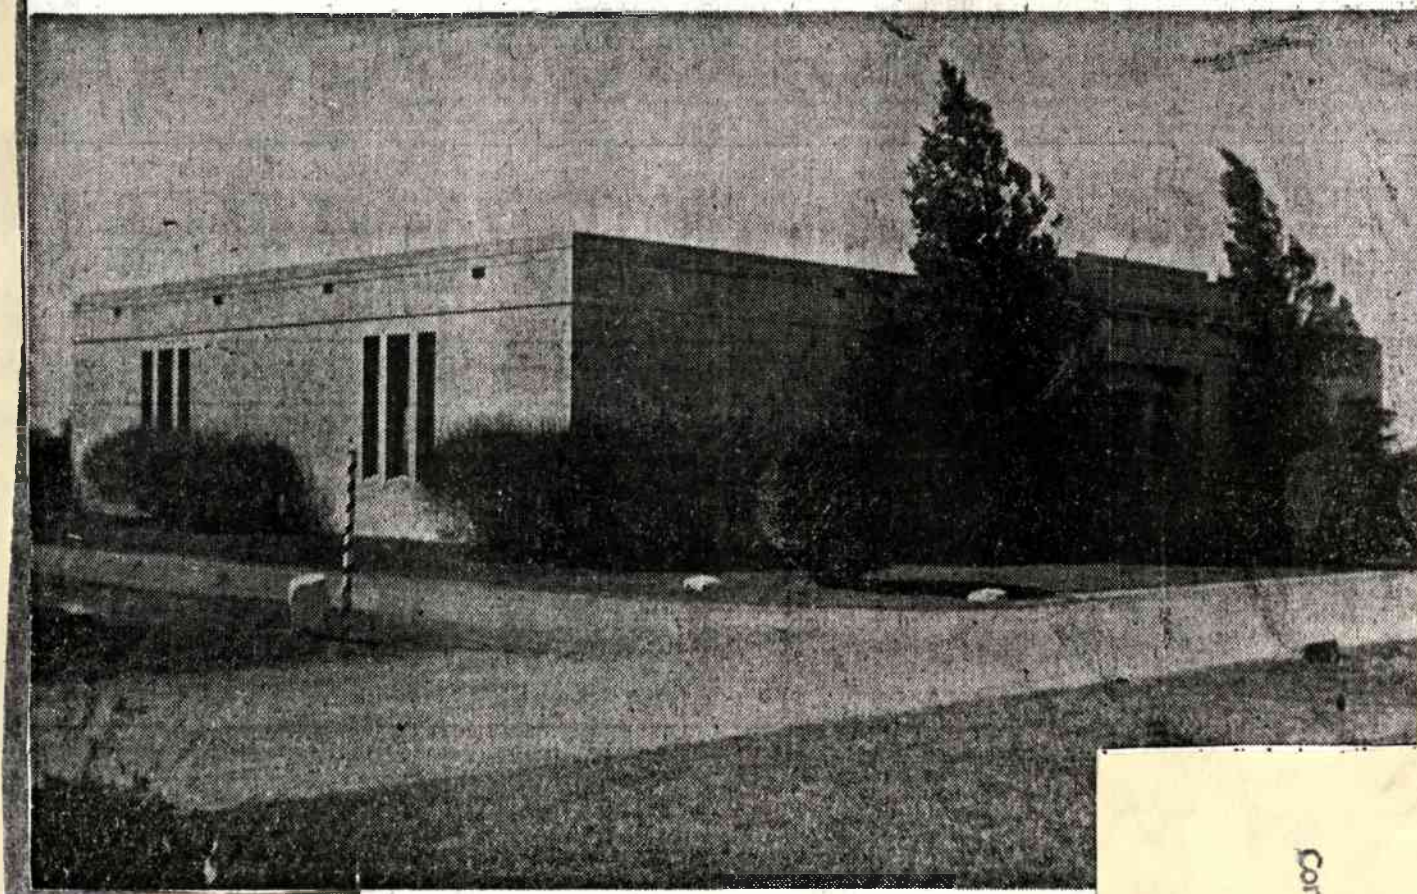

Surprisingly, malnutrition and hunger are listed in the ledger as frequent causes of death. Suicides dot the record. Morphine poisoning is also frequently listed. Still born infant deaths were many.

The ages of the ledger's personalities are unusually young. Compared to present day internment records, the ledger ages average about 20 years younger. Pointedly, the ledger's pages out of the past carry an important message: medical science and research have brought us a long, long way down the road of life.

NEW $250,000 HIGHLAND LAWN MAUSOLEUM will look like this, according to information released by the Cemetery Board of Regents. Plan Mausoleum Construction At Highland Lawn Cemetery

BY EULETA SLOVER

Int. July 12-1961

The Board of Cemetery Regents has approved plans for construction of a $250,000 mausoleum at Highland Lawn Cemetery which reportedly will be accomplished without cost to the city, according to information released Wednesday.

Simultaneously, official announcement was made of numerous other completed and soon-to-be completed improvements at the two municipal cemeteries for the purpose of simplifying the location of graves and to enhance interment accommodations. They include a new sign system installed at both Highland Lawn and Woodlawn cemeteries. George Boyer, superintendent, said the Board of Regents will enter into a contract soon with Ralph Brock and Associates of Champaign, Ill., for the construction tion of the mausoleum "on a consignment basis."

Plan Sale of Sites.

Under the proposed plan, Boyer said the building must be completed by Jan. 1, 1963, but agents, immediately upon beginning of the construction, will begin selling burial sites. The structure will be expected to be completely paid for by the time it is completed.

Patterned after the nation's largest and finest mausoleum, the building is to be situated in the park area of Highland Lawn in the southwest corner of the grounds where it will be clearly visible from the highway.

It will be a community type construction which means, according to Boyer's explanation, that all the 1,000 crypts will be completely enclosed. In addition there will be six family rooms of various sizes. Estimated cost of the individual crypts will probably be between $500 and $600 with the cost of the family rooms to be determined by the type of adornments desired by the purchasers, the superintendent advised.

In the past, construction of some family mausoleums in the cemetery has reached as high as $25,000, according to Boyer's information.

New Sign System.

Relative to the new cemetery signpost system, Boyer said the 18 inch by 36 inch signs will be mounted on posts and will indicate the various sections and divisions.

In the past, visitors have had to contact the cemetery office to learn the location of the specific area they sought. And in the after hours, this necessity has caused some persons to be unable to locate graves of their dead.

The situation has been especially aggravated by the extreme age of the two cemeteries, Boyer noted, adding that several special burial areas should always be easy to find since they hold so much historical significance.

For example, he alluded to the area in 122-year-old Woodlawn where 11 Confederate soldiers are buried. They died here during Civil War days and are listed as some of the few Rebel prisoners who were confined this far North.

Catholic Section.

In Woodlawn there is also a section known as "St. Joseph's Cemetery" and, although it was established by the city's oldest Catholic parish, its exact location is apparently little known to most churchmen today, Boyer related.

In Highland Lawn, a new section is to be added to the Jewish cemetery section within the next 30 days. This new two-acre, 600 grave area will be clearly indicated as will the present four-acre tract also owned by the United Hebrew Congregation.

"These special areas are only a few of the many sections that tell a vital and integral story about our Terre Haute past, one which includes names, dates and happenings to which we can point with pride," Boyer reflected, adding, "the new marker system will permit strangers a clearer direction to these facts."

Highland Lawn reportedly is one of the largest cemeteries in the Midwest and has received nearly 70,000 burials since its 190-acre grounds were opened Sept. 6, 1884. It has 25 fully developed sections with two more ready to be opened.

By contrast, Woodlawn dates back to 1839 when the city was but a struggling village. It contains 45 acres and, because of its age, has never been officially divided into sections or divisions.

Civil War Re-enacted

In Terre Haute

Tri-State Trades
The Civil War was re-enacted in Terre Haute about a month ago but this time instead of the Union vs. Confederacy, it was the Terre Haute Police Department vs. some Vigo County Vandals.

Highland Lawn Cemetery in Terre Haute was the scene of battle. It seems that vandals entered the cemetery sometime after nine o'clock on the evening of the 22nd of May and proceeded to use explosives to destroy an historic Civil War naval cannon.

A 65-foot flagpole near the cannon was sheared into four pieces by the explosion and two granite ledgers on private graves—one of them more than 1,000 feet from the scene of the explosion—were shattered by fragments from the barrel.

Immediately, the Terre Haute police and detectives went to work on the case but for a few days it seemed the vandals had stymied them.

The United War Veterans Council of Vigo County was advised by the FBI office at Indianapolis that the bureau would not investigate the incident because there was no federal law broken.

Police officials said the type of explosive used might have been black powder or permissible powder. Deputy sheriff Leo Spitler, who inspected the blast scene, thought possibly that the incident was intended to be a prank, but they overloaded the cannon with the permissible powder, a weak grade of dynamite.

The battle raged on for days but finally the police department and detectives put enough concrete evidence together to catch the vandals. They were apprehended and ordered to pay for the damages.

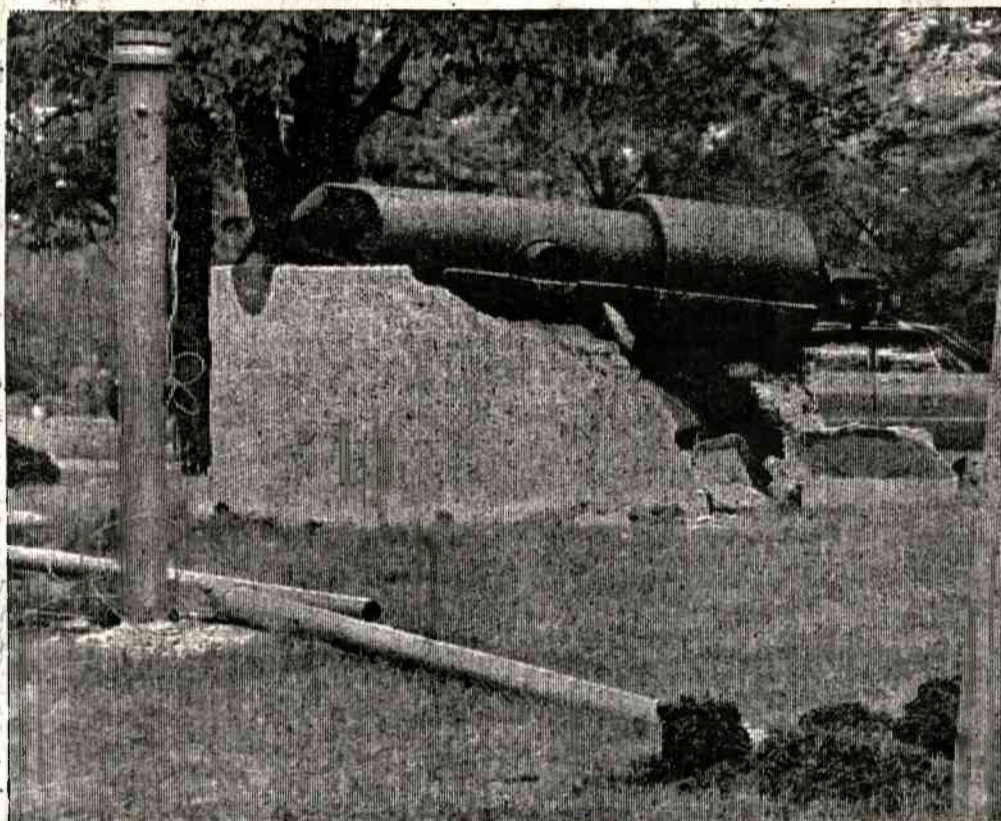

The battle of Terre Haute is just an example of incidents all over America. While boys will be boys historical property usually cannot be replaced.

SCENE OF EXPLOSION—The old historical cannon located on top of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Circle at Highland Lawn Cemetery was destroyed by an explosion shortly after midnight Tuesday. Damage to the area will be several thousands of dollars according to cemetery superintendent Matt Withrow. Martin Photo.

Blast Destroys Historical Cannon in Soldiers Circle

By PAT BARNES
Tribune Staff Writer

Terre Haute detectives are conducting an extensive investigation into the early Wednesday morning explosion at Highland Lawn Cemetery which destroyed the historical cannon in Soldiers and Sailors Circle.

Detectives said the explosion was caused by unknown person or persons placing some type of explosive in the barrel of the cannon. A fuse, detectives said was used to detonate the charge. No one was injured.

The cannon, which dates back to the Civil War, has been a historical marker at the cemetery for many years.

The force of the explosion tore off approximately five feet of the barrel of the cannon. Parts of the cannon barrel were scattered in all directions and one piece was found about 1,500 feet away from the site.

The explosion was heard by thousands of Terre Haute residents shortly after midnight. Numerous complaints were phoned into police concerning the explosion. At first police theorized the tremendous sound was a sonic boom.

very of the explosion was made by cemetery superintendent Matt Withrow about 8 a.m. who notified police.

Withrow told police he was awakened by the blast about 12:15 a.m. The cemetery superintendent lives in a home adjoining the cemetery.

Gates at the cemetery were closed at 9 p.m. Tuesday, Withrow said.

In addition to the cannon, a 65-foot flagpole was blown into four pieces from the impact of the explosion. The flagpole was located next to the cannon. The cannon was mounted on a concrete base approximately six feet long, two and one-half feet high and two feet wide. A large portion of the concrete base was destroyed by the explosion.

Investigating officers said the explosion caused several large holes in the area and that large pieces of the cannon were found as far as 12 inches in the ground.

A large ledger stone, located 500 feet from the point of the blast, was completely destroyed. Damage was estimated at $1,000.

Detectives Tony Gray and Fred Mongell have been assigned to investigate.

Both detectives have requested anyone having information concerning the blast to contact the detective bureau.

Mayor Leland Larrison said the incident was deplorable, and he would personally make every effort to see the guilty persons are prosecuted.

The mayor said, "At a time like this when Memorial Day is so close it's terrible that someone would have committed such a terrible act especially at the Soldiers and Sailors Circle."

Powder Charge Tears Apart Old Cannon At Highland Lawn

Vandals early Wednesday morning used explosives to destroy an historic Civil War naval cannon located at Highland Lawn Cemetery.

A 65-foot flagpole near the cannon was sheared into four pieces by the explosion and two granite ledgers on private graves—one of them more than 1,000 feet from the scene of the explosion—were shattered by fragments from the barrel.

Damage estimates ranged upwards to $5,000.

Terre Haute police and detectives and officers of the Vigo County Sheriff's Department were called to the cemetery shortly after 8 a.m. Wednesday when the vandalism was discovered by an employee who reported it to M. O. Withrow, superintendent of city cemeteries.

The explosion was heard by many residents in the east section of the city shortly after midnight. Police and fire headquarters received numerous calls concerning the blast which at that time was thought to have been caused by a sonic boom.

Withrow, who lives in a house adjoining the cemetery, said he heard the explosion about 12:15 a.m.

He said the gates to the cemetery were locked about 9 p.m. Tuesday, and he made a trip through the area shortly before closing them.

Mayor Leland Larrison, who visited the cemetery Wednesday morning along with Chief of Police Glen Means, said, "It is regrettable that this was done, particularly at this time of the year with Memorial Day only a few days away. Every effort will be made to apprehend the subjects responsible for the vandalism."

Soldiers and Sailors Circle, a grassy hilltop 100 feet in diameter, is located on the highest spot in Highland Lawn Cemetery. A circular drive passes around it.

On the outside of the drive, surrounding the circle are the headstones of veterans of the Civil War, the Spanish-American War, World War I, World War II, the Korean conflict and the Vietnam War.

Headstones on the graves of service men buried there were damaged by the explosion.

James Hollis, president of the Board of Cemetery Regents, estimated the cannon, which carried the date of 1863 on the muzzle, weighed between eight and 10 tons. It was rifled and designed to shoot 100-pound cannon balls. Where it came from or when it was placed in the cemetery, which was established about 1888, was not known by cemetery officials.

The cannon was approximately 10 feet long, had a six and one-quarter-inch bore, was six inches thick from the outside to the bore at the breech and three and one-half inches thick from the outside to the bore at the muzzle.

It was mounted on a concrete base about six feet long, two and one-half feet high and two feet wide. The base was blasted by the explosion.

A piece of fuse similar to that used for blasting in coal mines was found at the scene and taken to police headquarters. It measured about 16 feet long.

Police officials said the type of explosive used might have been black powder or permissible powder.

Deputy Sheriff Leo Spitler, who inspected the blast scene, said he thought possibly "someone intended to shoot the cannon as a prank, but overloaded it with permissible powder, a weak grade of dynamite."

Detectives Tony Gray and Fred Mongell were assigned to investigate the explosion.

Withrow said, "It's impossible to set an exact estimate on the damage done. The cannon is irreplaceable."

As the investigation continued Wednesday afternoon, burial services for an elderly veteran were conducted about 100 feet from the scene of the explosion.

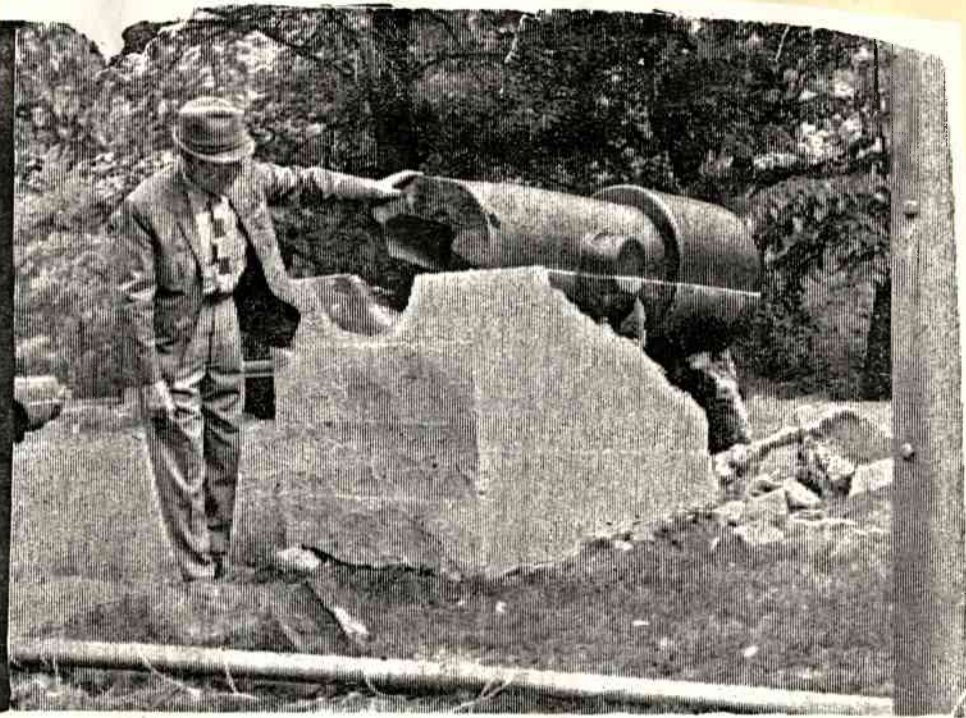

The United War Veterans Council of Vigo County was advised by the Federal Bureau of Investigation office at Indianapolis that the bureau plans no investigation of the case. An FBI spokesman said since no federal law was violated, the bureau will not act on the matter.

Rewards Offered In Cannon Blast

Two rewards have been offered for the arrest and conviction of persons responsible for the explosion which destroyed the historic cannon at Highland Lawn Cemetery Wednesday.

Thursday several funeral directors of Vigo County offered a $250 reward for the apprehension of the culprits.

Earlier the Wayne Newton American Legion Post 346 offered a $100 reward, making a total of $350 in rewards.

The Civil War Naval cannon located on top of Soldiers and Sailors Circle and a 65-foot flagpole were destroyed when someone filled the cannon barrel with explosive and detonated the charge. In addition to the cannon and flagpole several private tombstones were damaged from flying debris.

No exact damage figure has been released. However city police officials estimate the damage will be in excess of $5,000.

Investigating officers theorize that black powder was used by the vandals to destroy the cannon. A piece of the fuse used to set off the charge was found at the scene by investigators.

Detective Tony Gray Thursday said the detective department has several suspects under investigation.

Gray requested anyone having information about the incident to contact him or the detective bureau.

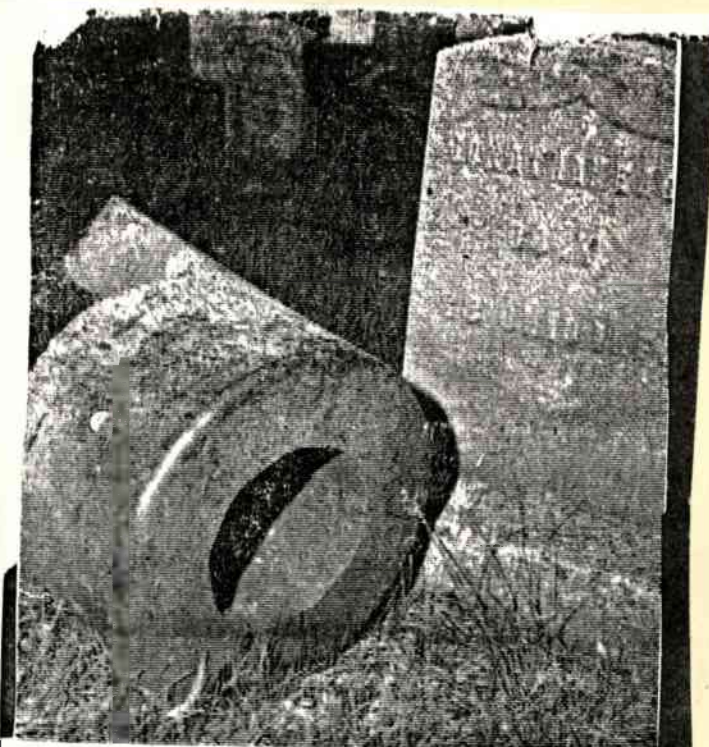

Highland Lawn Cemetery was purchased by the city of Terre Haute on March 13, 1884.

During a meeting of the Board of Cemetery Commissioners in 1897 the Soldiers and Sailors Circle was established, according to cemetery records.

James Hollis, president of the Board of Cemetery Regents said the Civil War cannon, which weighed about 10 tons, carried the date of 1863 on the muzzle. The large naval cannon Hollis said was rifled and designed to fire 100-pound cannon balls. It was about 10 feet long, had a six-inch bore and the barrel was about six inches thick.

Mrs. Dorothy Clark, Vigo County historian, said that Col. Richard W. Thompson, a native of Terre Haute and a former secretary of the Navy, was instrumental in acquiring the cannon for Soldiers and Sailors Circle.

Mrs. Clark said nearly all historic cannons have had the misfortune of being destroyed by vandals. She noted the first cannon in Terre Haute which was once located on the lawn of the county courthouse was destroyed by vandals.

Three Students Suspects In Cemetery Explosion

By JOE WAGNER

Star Staff Writer

Terre Haute detectives Tuesday afternoon arrested three Indiana State University students—reported to be members of a social fraternity—and charged them with malicious trespass in connection with the destruction of a Civil War naval cannon and other damage at Highland Lawn Cemetery last Wednesday.

Police identified the students as Conrad Gregory II, 3400 S. 7th St., Terre Haute; Rodney Horton, 21, Prairieon Road, Terre Haute, and Mark Hart, 20, RR 1, Franklin, Ind.

Detectives said they were seeking a fourth student believed to have been involved in the explosion.

The three students arrested were released on their own recognizance to await a City Court hearing.

Identification of the social fraternity the students allegedly belonged to was not released by police.

The arrests were made by Asst. Chief of Detectives Ray Tryon and Detectives Tony Gray and Fred Mongell.

On Wednesday, May 21, explosives were used to destroy an historic Civil War naval cannon

A heavy charge of explosives blasted about five feet from the cannon muzzle and fragments of the piece damaged two private grave ledgers in the cemetery—one of them about 1,000

Rewards totalling more than $850 have been offered by local veterans organizations and citizens for the arrest and conviction of the vandals.

Damage estimates to the cemetery ranged upward to $5,000. The Civil War cannon was procured for the cemetery by Col. Richard W. Thompson, a onetime Secretary of Navy. Thompson, a longtime resident of Terre Haute, served as Navy secretary under the Presidency of Rutherford B. Hayes. He was appointed to the post in 1877. Thompson died in 1900.

M. O. Withrow, city cemetery superintendent, and James Hollis, president of the board of cemetery regents, said it probably is impossible to replace the cannon.

Terre Haute police and detectives and members of the Vigo County Sheriff's Department were called to the cemetery about 8 a.m. last Wednesday when the vandalism was discovered by cemetery employees who reported it to Withrow.

During the Civil War, Thompson was commandant of Camp Dick Thompson, near Terre Haute, and served as provost marshal of the district.

Withrow, who was appointed superintendent of the cemeteries by Mayor Lee Larrison, Jan. 1, 1908, majored in history at Indiana State University and has always been interested in history.

This led him to take a particular interest in historical phases of the cemeteries. He eventually hopes to locate all visible markers and have them raised on new foundations. Some are buried as much as five inches.

Also, he and his assistant, Arthur Wright, who also is interested in history, and Mrs. Dorothy Brown, his clerk, who is especially interested in family trees, have spent many hours going over the old records of the cemeteries. They are straightening out the books, bringing them up to date, rebinding some and making a card index.

Withrow asked members of a Boy Scout Troop, of which Leo Phillips is scout master, to scrub all the stones of soldiers buried in Soldiers Circle as a service project before Memorial Day. A Girl Scout Troop also cleaned up the McPherson lot, cleaning the stones and planting flowers, as a service project.

On the McPherson lot is the grave of Samantha Rogers McPherson, the first person on the records as having been buried in the cemetery. She died Oct. 29, 1884.

The first burial ground in Terre Haute was on a triangle east and west of Sixth Street between Ohio Street and Wabash Avenue. The original purchase of 16 acres for Woodlawn Cemetery was made by the city in 1839, and later another 16 acres was added to Woodlawn.

H. D. Milns was superintendent of this cemetery for a 20 years after 1842. In the first 10 years, 1,427 persons were buried there, and Milns dug every grave himself. The first person to be buried there was a little girl.

In the 1857 record book of Woodlawn, the causes of death are registered as they were in that day. Now, a death certificate is required but no cause of death is registered in the record books.

It is interesting to note the causes of death on those days—flux, bad whiskey (there were a lot of these), consumption, congestive chills, the pip, tisisick, brain fever, quinsy, fits, scrafalo, thrush, etc.

One hundred and thirty-seven acres of land was bought by the city from Ray G. Jenckes for Highland Lawn Cemetery in 1883. The first lot was bought by Louis McPherson, the second by J. W. Cruft, the third by James Coordes, the fourth by Thompson, and the eighth purchase was of 60 graves by the Rose Orphans Home. Only seven children are buried there.

In both cemeteries men are buried who served in the Civil War, Spanish American War, War of 1812, both World Wars, the Korean Conflict and the Vietnam war.

At Soldiers and Sailors Circle, which was dedicated shortly after Highland Lawn Cemetery was opened, any military man or woman with an honorable discharge may be buried. The cemetery provides the grave and the government provides the stone.

Three Enter Guilty Pleas in Cannon Blast

T. H. Trib

5/29/69

Three Indiana State University students, charged with malicious trespass in connection with the explosion of the historic cannon at Highland Lawn cemetery, pleaded guilty in City Court Thursday morning.

Pleading guilty were Frank L. Miklozek, Jr., 22, RR 25; Rodney O. Horton, 21, Prairieton Rd., and Mark S. Hart, 20, Franklin. They were represented by Miklozek's father, Postmaster Frank L. Miklozek, Sr., an attorney.

The fourth defendant, Conrad D. Gregory II, 21, 3400 S. 7th St., was represented by Attorney Thomas Hicks. Gregory waived formal arraignment and was granted a continuance until June 6 when a plea will be entered.

The courtroom was filled to capacity when the four young men entered the courtroom. Various veterans groups and friends of the boys were in the crowd.

The elder Miklozek, speaking for his son, Horton, and Hart, said he did not condone the act of vandalism and felt some kind of penalty should be imposed. He said that's why the boys had entered the guilty pleas.

He termed their act a prank, rather than vandalism. "They wanted to shoot the cannon, not destroy it," he said.

Miklozek termed it a prank that "had bad results." He pointed out to the court that not one of the boys has been in trouble before.

The elder Miklozek said it is his understanding that the cannon can be repaired. He told City Judge Paul M. Messick that the boys would make every effort to have the cannon restored, if the court wanted it done.

"I would rather be anyplace but here," Miklozek said, as he made his 20-minute plea for his son and the other two young men.

Judge Messick set sentencing of the three who pleaded guilty for June 10.

The Judge said he has the alternative of fining them up to twice the amount of the damages, estimated at $5,000, or sentencing them up to 12 months in jail or at the Indiana State Farm.

Judge Messick said, "Anyone who willfully violates the law, the court has no leniency with them. Without laws we cannot have justice."

Included in the participating groups at the Memorial Day service will be the Grand Army of the Republic (GAR) and the women of GAR Circle No. 56; United Spanish War Veterans of Vigo County and its auxiliary; World War I Veterans' Barracks 912 and its auxiliary; Von Schepfer Post 9 of the Disabled American Veterans; VFW Posts 972, 1005 and 6574.

Also, American Legion Posts 40, 104, 328, 340, 346 and 404; Gold Star Mothers, Chapter 16; Navy Mothers of Terre Haute; Mothers of World War II; Marine League No. 19; Sons of the American Legion; Boy Scout Troops 317, 346 and 411, and Girl Scout Troops 96, 123 and 130.

Following the benediction, delivered by Campbell, three volleys of gunfire will echo through the cemetery in memory of departed comrades of all wars.

The service concludes after the Memorial Day band sounds taps.

Small U. S. flags are being placed on the graves of all known veterans in nearly all Vigo County cemeteries, Heller reported. Nearly 19,000 flags were obtained for the purpose.

Heller said that the management of Roselawn Memorial Park will not permit flags or other decorations on graves there, but instead places large flags at the various entrances to the cemetery.

Some flags are left at cemetery offices, Heller said, for placing on veterans' graves that may be inadvertently missed. The public is urged to bring to the attention of cemetery personnel any veterans' graves missed in the flag placings.

Many more flags than usual are being placed this year at the two city-operated cemeteries, Highland Lawn and Woodlawn, thanks to the efforts of M. O. Withrow, city cemetery superintendent, and his staff.

Many tombstones, which had settled several inches and were nearly lost from view, have been raised and reset in both cemeteries. Markers once covered with soil and sod have been restored to their original placings.

Both the head and foot markers at the grave of Col. Richard Wigginton Thompson had sunk and been covered for many years. It was this grave that particularly interested Withrow as he has been a student of history for years.

Thompson served as U.S. Secretary of the Navy during the term of President Rutherford B. Hayes from 1877 to 1881. Because this outstanding Terre Hautean's grave had not been marked, veterans had inadvertently not been honoring it as they did the others.

Withrow, who was appointed cemetery superintendent Jan. 1, 1968, majored in history at Indiana State University and has always been interested in history.

This led him to take a particular interest in historical phases of the cemeteries. He eventually hopes to locate all visible markers and have them raised on new foundations. Some are buried as much as five inches.

Scouts Scrub Stones

Withrow asked members of a Boy Scout Troop, of which Leo Phillips is Scoutmaster, to scrub all the stones of soldiers buried in Soldiers Circle as a service project before Memorial Day. A Girl Scout troop also cleaned up the McPherson lot, cleaning the stones and planting flowers, as a service project.

On the McPherson lot is the grave of Samantha Rogers McPherson, the first person on the records as having been buried in the cemetery. She died Oct. 29, 1884.

At Soldiers and Sailors Circle, which was dedicated shortly after Highland Lawn Cemetery was opened, any military man or woman with an honorable discharge may be buried. The cemetery provides the grave and the government provides the stone.

Apologize For Cemetery Acts

In accordance with instructions from City Court Judge Paul M. Messick handed down last Tuesday, four young men who pleaded guilty to destruction of a Civil War canon at Highland Lawn Cemetery on May 21, and with other damage at the cemetery, Friday made public apology for their actions.

The four, Frank L. Miklozek Jr., 22, RR 25; Conrad D. Gregory II, 21, 3400 S. 7th St.; Rodney O. Horton, Indianapolis, and Mark S. Hart, 20, Franklin, were ordered by the court to make restitution of $3,637.82 for damages resulting from the explosion at the cemetery. The court also took under advisement until Sept. 15, 90-day jail sentences for the quartet.

The communication to the news media read:

"Dear News Editor:

As a part of our punishment for the recent incident at Memorial Circle in the Highland Lawn Cemetery, the judge requested that all of the participants make a public apology. Written below is our public apology and we would appreciate it, if you would print it in your newspaper or transmit it over the radio and TV air waves so that we can comply with Judge Messick's request. Thanking you in advance for doing this for us, we remain."

To The Citizens of Terre Haute, Indiana:

A few days ago we were responsible for an incident which resulted in the damaging of the Civil War cannon in the Memorial Circle of Highland Lawn Cemetery and grave ledgers covering two graves.

We would like for the citizens of Terre Haute to know that this was not meant to be. It started out as a prank, which backfired unfortunately, for all concerned, and the damage which ensued was unintentional and purely accidental. In fact we were just as horrified as you were, since all we intended to do was to shoot the cannon, but then it was too late.

Please accept our sincere apologies for having caused this damage and for having caused anyone any grief or sorrow or for having damaged a memorial to our heroic dead.

None of us feels that we should come out of this incident unscathed and we feel that Judge Paul M. Messick in his adjudication of the case has dealt fairly with us under all the circumstances, and in such a way that we have a chance to redeem ourselves in your eyes and in our own.

In closing we would like to let you know that we are truly sorry for our unseemly behavior and we feel strongly that the punishment meted out to us will help us to be better citizens and to be of more use to our communities and to our country.

Please find it in your hearts to forgive four young men who made a serious mistake."

Respectfully yours.

Gerstmeyer Pupils Will Restore Damaged Cannon

STAR 9-29-69 PZ

A 10-ton Civil War naval cannon at Highland Lawn Cemetery that was damaged by vandals last May 21 was taken to Gerstmeyer High School, Monday to be restored to its original condition.

Howard Turner, director of adult education and allied areas for the Vigo County School Corp., said eight Gerstmeyer pupils from welding, machine and automobile shop classes will do the work. Turner said it is hoped the work can be completed before Nov. 11.

The Terre Haute Board of Cemetery Regents will pay for materials used on the project but no labor costs are involved, according to Turner.

Meanwhile, four Indiana State University students who used explosives to damage the cannon await final disposition of their cases in City Court. The tentative date for the final hearing has been set for Oct. 21 by City Judge Paul M. Messick.

The cannon was located in the center of Soldiers and Sailors Circle at the cemetery. The vandals packed the barrel with an explosive charge, then used a fuse to set it off. A 65-foot flagpole and several grave markers nearby also were damaged by the blast.

Workmen using heavy equipment moved the cannon to the high school welding shop Monday morning.

Turner said the barrel pieces will be welded to a solid metal core and an amalgamate compound will be used to fill in cracks and missing sections of the muzzle.

While the gun is being rebuilt, a new concrete foundation for it will be constructed at the cemetery. It is hoped rededication ceremonies for the restored cannon can be held on Veterans Day.

The cannon carried the date of 1863 on the muzzle. It was rifled to shoot 100-pound cannon balls. It was about 10 feet long with a six-inch bore.

A native of Terre Haute, Col. Richard W. Thompson, who was a former Secretary of the Navy, was instrumental in obtaining the cannon, which was placed in the cemetery before the turn of the 20th century.

As work on the cannon progresses, Terre Haute detectives are continuing their investigation into vandalism at Woodlawn Cemetery last week which resulted in 26 grave markers being toppled from their bases. The Vigo County Sheriff's Department is looking for vandals who damaged between 35 and 40 grave markers at the Prairieton Cemetery last July.

(L. H. HENDERSON)

Senseless vandalism at Highland Lawn Cemetery sometime Sunday night or Monday morning resulted in $5,000 damage to the cemetery's chapel.

Arthur C. Allen, cemetery superintendent, reported to police Monday afternoon someone had built a fire in the middle of the room, thrown beer bottles through the stained glass windows and pushed a stone from the building's roof.

Allen said another party had been held in the chapel last Friday because several beer bottles were found. The door was forced open both occasions, but no vandalism occurred at the first incident.

The city-owned cemetery is located on U.S. 40 east of Terre Haute. Officer Dennis Henderson investigated the vandalism.

Highland Lawn Foot Bridge Razed, Pond Being Filled

By JANET STAGG

Tribune Staff Writer

Built 22 years after the organization of Highland Lawn Cemetery, the small white foot bridge straddling one of three ponds and part of one pond, near U. S. Highway 40, is being razed to make way for improvements to the cemetery.

The cemetery is located on property which used to hold the residence of a family called Jenckes. On one of the hills of the cemetery is where the family home stood. Now the spot has been designated as the final resting place of the last member of the family.

The white bridge and pond were located on the east side of the main gates on the east side of the cemetery. A date on the bridge marks it as being constructed in 1906. Officials condemned it a few years ago because of cracks in the sides and the thinning floor which at the thickest place was four inches in depth.

It was decided by the members of the Board of Cemetery Regents to tear down the bridge, fill in the pond and make the site available for graves much like those offered on the west side of the entrance. The destruction was started about three weeks ago.

Filling in the pond will be the main chore of the construction. According to Charles Chasteen, superintendent of the cemetery, approximately 200 feet of sewer pipe will have to be laid from where the bridge is now to another pond which was connected with the one being filled in. The pipe will carry water which drains from many of the roads in the cemetery. As the bridge is torn down the pieces are thrown into the almost empty pond as filler. After stone, sand and dirt are added a two-foot layer of black dirt will be put on top for the benefit of growing grass.

Completion Next Year

Chasteen has set completion of the project as next year since the hole, which at the bottom is 15 feet down, must be drained, leaks must be checked, springs must be watched for, then all of the filling-in must be done before the side will be ready for graves.

In other parts of the cemetery, the tranquillity has not been distributed by the construction. Upon entering the shady cemetery the short entrance road before the gates are brightened by hundreds of petunias. On the entrance arch Chasteen and his workers have added three flag poles. The pole on the west side holds the American Legion flag while the east pole holds a veterans flag.

in the middle is an American flag which has flown over Washington, D. C.

The old bell tower part of the entrance still houses the bell which was tolled slowly for funerals in the olden days, but the sound no longer rings across the countryside.

Used for Storage

Another building on the cemetery grounds is the chapel which is used entirely for storage now. Stained glass windows still give the interior of the building a reverent look as a visitor can almost hear the long forgotten horses pulling the hearse up the driveway for services. Several windows on the westside of the building have been destroyed by vandals, but the magnificent orange-red windows, of leaded stained glass, on the east side of the building have only one small pane missing.

Tile floors still grace the walkways and in the rear of the chapel are six vault like storage areas where bodies, in caskets, could be kept for funerals in case of mass deaths. Dark wood doors on the storage units matches that of the wood used to surround the doorways.

Included in the 138 acres of cemetery property is Soldiers and Sailors Circle honoring veterans of America's wars. On holidays seven flags on 12 feet high poles are flown. From the circle a visitor can see much of the other cemetery property.

Like most cemeteries Highland Lawn has its folklore. One story tells of the mausoleum owner who stocked his final resting place with a telephone and a bottle of liquid spirits. As he explained it if he woke up the first thing he would want would be a drink then he would call someone to come and get him.

Another mausoleum holds a statue of a bulldog. Stories connected with the dog range from that the former owner, who is buried in the mausoleum wanted to take the dog with him when he died, but the dog had bitten a child and had been shot.

Besides Soldier's and Sailor's Circle which is designated for a certain group the cemetery has a Babyland, where the bodies of small children are put to rest.

Early cemetery records show the cause of death of people buried at Highland Lawn. Some of them are summer complaint, indigestion, killed, typhoid fever and drowning.

With the filling-up of part of one pond the cemetery is still left with three ponds. One is called Turtle Pond because of the number of turtles seen in the area of the water.

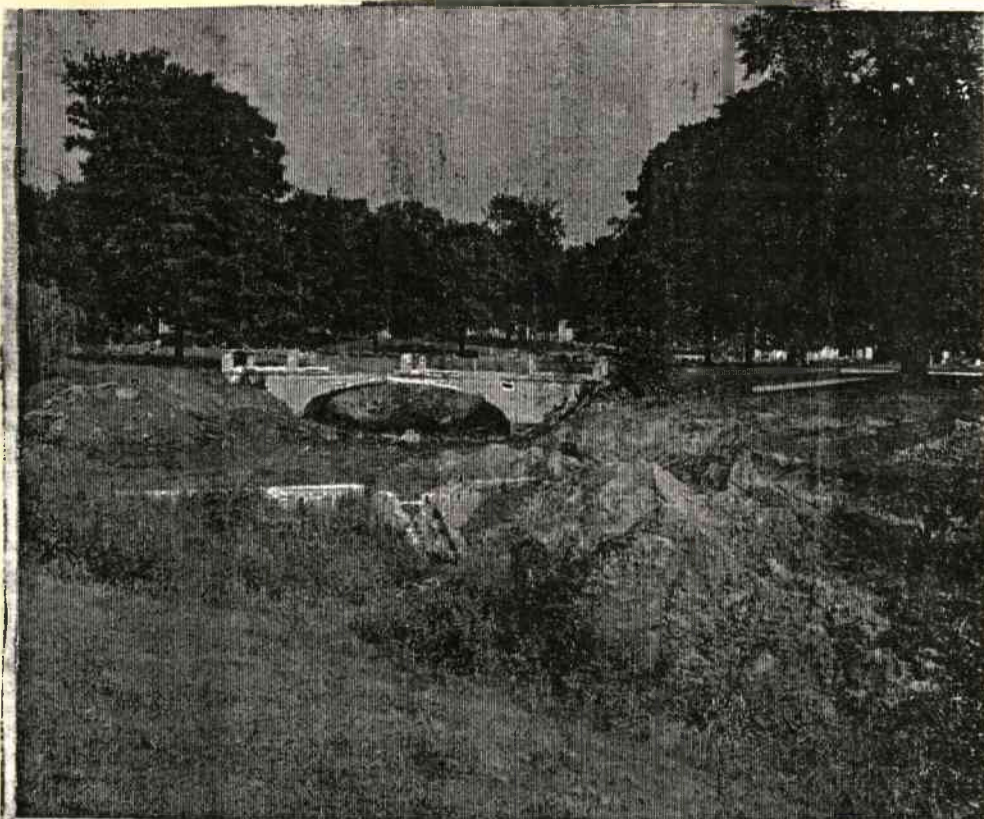

Highland Lawn Cemetery has the graves of people from almost every religion, color and creed.

Mayor William J. Brighton announced Monday the city is donating 200 additional lots for Terre Haute veterans in Highland Lawn Cemetery.

Mayor Brighton said the lots are to be used for the veterans who die without lots and could not afford them.

"This is very little a municipality can do for local veterans," the mayor said.

The request for the lots was received from the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion.

Mayor Brighton reported a similar request for cemetery lots had been made in 1897. At that time, the lots were given. Only three lots remain open now from that original allocation.

Mayor Brighton explained the city would have donated the lots without the request from the local groups if it had been known the need existed.

"This amounts to only a small token of the city's appreciation for the sacrifices these people have made so we can live in a free society," Mayor Brighton concluded.

Damage To Cemetery Garage (CTH)

Fire caused an estimated $15,000 damage Monday to a garage at Highland Lawn Cemetery, 4520 Wabash Ave., fire officials said.

According to reports, an employe at the garage was cleaning machinery parts with gasoline when the fumes apparently touched off the blaze.

A considerable amount of damage was done to the contents of the buildings, reports said. Several pieces of lawn equipment were destroyed by the fire.

A city fireman, Earl Hayden, assigned to Company No. 8, reportedly suffered a heart attack while fighting the fire was taken to Terre Haute Regional Hospital where he was admitted.

Pumpers 8 and 11 fought the fire which was reported at 1:09 p.m. Monday.

X STIFFY GREEN

East of Terre Haute, on Wabash Avenue, just a little way out of town, a curious motorist will glimpse the entrance to Highland Lawn Cemetery. In daylight, the massive stone gatehouse resembles a set from Camelot with its ancient architectural details. By night, under a full moon, it is an eerie castle that guards the home of the dead.

Highland cemetery is one of the most scenic routes on our unusual journey. Organized in 1884, the grounds are covered with elaborate marble tombstones and ornate mausoleums. Two ponds lay on the east side, creating, a tranquil effect.

The feature of high interest to us at Highland Lawn is a particular crypt engraved with the name, John G. Heini. Within this weathered shrine, at the rear, a strange sentry awaits the unaware. Seated alertly on the marble floor, is what appears to be the preserved body of a dog. It is said that the poor beast, after his master's demise, refused to eat and eventually died of hunger and grief. They say his loyalty was rewarded with a place of honor in the family tomb.

In fact, "Stiffy Green" is carved from stone and sat on the Heini porch for decades. Upon Mr. Heini's death, his wife requested that the statue be placed within the vault. Nevertheless, they say that, at night, those canine eyes glow green in the dark, and that they seem to follow one's movements.

Although this reporter did not have occasion to visit Highland Lawn Cemetery after sunset, I did view the animal one afternoon, and can verify that, indeed, I had the strange sensation that those frozen, marble eyes were staring balefully back at me.

Telephone and electric services?

Cemeteries (T.H.)

New book will contain information about an unusual mausoleum here

TS DEC 17 1978

By DOROTHY J. CLARK
Tribune Writer

The authors of a new book about death and dying to be published soon are planning to include some information concerning Terre Haute's history the unusual story of a mausoleum in Highland Lawn Cemetery.

For over half a century, the story has been circulating that Martin Alonzo Sheets had telephone and electric services installed in his mausoleum. Rumor had it that he believed that if he revived after death he could call for assistance.

Needing to know for sure whether the story is factual or folk legend, the writers appealed for accurate information, even though they had found references to this mausoleum in various publications.

This writer knows that the most accurate source of information about cemeteries, tombstones and mausoleums in the area can be obtained only from James Hollis, retired head of the Hollis Monument Company.

He remembered the circumstances very well. how Sheets bought the lot in Highland Lawn in 1910 and proceeded to hire carpenters to build the mausoleum. According to Hollis, these men were not "granite people," and the building proved to be unsatisfactory and only temporary. Hollis' father was then called to tear down the structure and build again. The fine mausoleum is the result, lined with Italian marble and fitted with statuary and three crypts only.

Their only child, a daughter Ethel, died at age 13 months and was buried in the New Hope Cemetery on the Darwin Road along with others of the Sheets family. When the mausoleum was completed, her remains were re-interred there. One account tells of the small tombstone erected outside the mausoleum giving her dates of birth and death and the carved likeness of the farm home in Honey Creek Township where she lived such a short time.

Known for his many eccentricities, Sheets hung a handsome chandelier of bronze and cut glass prisms which he prized highly in the vestibule of the new mausoleum. This caused the rumor that he planned electric lighting and the telephone rumor was tacked on to make the story even more interesting. He was probably no more afraid of being buried alive than anyone else.

Who was Martin A. Sheets? He was born just south of Paris in Edgar County, Illinois on Sept. 11, 1853, one of several sons of pioneers Hiram and Emaline (Sizemore) Sheets.

In 1881 he married Susan W. Parisho, beautiful daughter of Edgar County pioneers John J. and Barbara Ann Parisho.

After the death of his father, Sheets took up cattle buying and raising stock on the old homestead located between Paris and Hume. Before the turn of the century, he moved to Vigo County, Indiana, and settled on a farm in Honey Creek Township where they lived until purchasing the Soules home, 654 Ohio St., and moving to Terre Haute in 1906.

Sheets had suffered an attack of blood poisoning from which he never fully recovered. Retired from active business, he engaged in a private loan operation, dispensing charity until his death in 1926.

The foundation of his fortune came from his wife's family inheritance which they used over the years to help the needy. They were joint donors of the nurses' home at Union Hospital. Their farm was willed to the Boys Club, and $50,000 was given to the YWCA. At one time Sheets owned land in Taylorville (now Dresser) and sold the lots to residents for very small sums like 50 cents a month, until they were paid for. In this way he made it possible for many indigent families to own their own homes.

Sheets came of hardy stock, and his ideas of life and the hereafter influenced his charities. Not affiliated with any church or creed, he attended church alternately at the Methodist Episcopal, his mother's belief, and the Christian Church, his wife's choice.

He was addicted to making wills, and numerous signed wills complete with codicils added later were found in his safe. His last will was drawn two weeks before his death by Crawford McKeen, president of McKeen's National Bank, but he was too weak to sign it. His later years were spent in worry over disposition of his money and property.

Because Sheets was a very large man, his bronze casket was made to order with a silver plate inscribed with his name. His widow died in 1929 and was interred in the stone mausoleum with her family.

In addition to the unusual mausoleum M. A. Sheets planned for his own family, he also erected a most unusual monument in memory of his grandfather, John Sheets, in the New Hope Cemetery on the Darwin Road. A soldier in the War of 1812, he died in 1881 at the age of 91 years.

To commemorate his grandfather's pioneer days, he designed the monument in the form of a tree trunk around which wound an ivy vine. An eagle perched on the top, and in the niches where the branches had been cut away sit squirrels, and a carved axe seems thrust into the tree base. Snakes entwine themselves upward. The stone carver achieved all this from one solid piece of Indiana limestone. Needless to say, this tombstone has aroused much comment over the past 70 years.

According to Jim Hollis, the inscription at the base of the monument originally read: "Erected to the memory of.....at a cost of $300." Just before World War I when prices went up, Sheets contacted the elder Hollis to change the inscription slightly, making the three into an eight. It now reads $800. As we said, Martin Alonzo Sheets was an eccentric.

Mausoleum in the news

The Sheets family's last resting place, this imposing stone mausoleum in Highland Lawn Cemetery, will be one of the interesting stories included in a new book on death and dying to be published soon. An eccentric's plan to include an ornate chandelier in the vestibule of this marble lined mausoleum along with fine statuary led to public belief that he planned to install electricity to light the chandelier. Then the rumor went around town that he planned to install a telephone. This tall tale appeared in a Chicago newspaper, and from then on the story has been handed down and believed by everyone until now.

Highland Lawn's fabled terrier: Stiffy Green

By Mary Kenney
The Woods Staff Writer

*Cemeteries (V) Community Affairs File
The Woods 10/27/82*

Legend has it that a stuffed dog guards the inside of a crypt at Highland Lawn Cemetery on Wabash Avenue. Other sources agree there is a dog at the crypt of John L. Heint, but that it is made of stone. However, after finally going to see for ourselves after three years of listening to these tales, The Woods Chief Photographer Anne Keough and I only found an empty crypt. Puzzled, I asked the caretaker about the dog.

According to him, Stiffy Green, the fabled canine, was removed by the family of Heint last fall after local students had vandalized the crypt. The looters were not able to walk away with the dog but they succeeded in scratching both the wrought-iron crypt door and the surrounding granite.

The caretaker knew nothing more on the case except that this was not the first time a crypt or grave had been vandalized in Terre Haute, and that he thought the Heint family lived in Indianapolis. But telephone operators in that city had no Heints listed.

After phone calls and a trip to the main branch of Vigo County Library — and after two trips to Highland Lawn with Keough — and several conversations with local residents — I came up with two stories about Stiffy Green.

The most popular is that when John L. Heint died his terrier refused to eat and after pining for his master for several months, died from hunger and grief. According to an Oct. 1978 article of the Wabash Valley Focus, Stiffy Green's loyalty was rewarded with a place of honor in the family tomb.

The second, and seemingly more believable legend about the dog is that he was carved from stone and sat on the Heint's front porch for decades. When John Heint died his wife insisted the dog be moved to the crypt. Stiffy Green was not there for long when the vandalism incident occurred.

There are also two stories connected to the name "Stiffy Green." Some sources say the dog was nicknamed because his fur had turned green due to the musty and cool crypt atmosphere. But if the tale about Stiffy Green's body being of clay is true, legend has it that the terrier's name is "Stiffy Green Eyes" because his eyes glow luminous green at night, following the movements of cemetery visitors.

State grant will help city restore tower at Highland Lawn Cemetery

* Cemeteries (60) - Highland Lawn

By Howard Greninger
Tribune-Star Staff Reporter

Highland Lawn Cemetery has been awarded a matching state grant of $58,000 from the Build Indiana Fund for the restoration of the bell tower at the cemetery's entrance, according to Mayor P. Pete Chalos.

Rita Kendall, superintendent of city cemeteries, said the city has raised about 92 percent of the funds needed for the matching grant through contributions since 1988. The department needs about $10,400 to reach the match, Kendall said.

The state funds have been appropriated in the bi-annual budget of the Build Indiana Fund, Rep. Vern Tincher said, D-Riley. Final approval next must come from the state Budget Committee and the state Budget Agency before funds are released to the city, Tincher said.

The tower and gateway were completed in 1894, Kendall said. The top of the tower, which is 60 feet high, was removed "several years ago" and replaced with a different roof. Some weather damage has recently occurred at the tower, she said.

"It is the intention of the Cemetery Department to restore the tower to its natural state," Kendall said. Small turrets sat atop the former roof. Some of those have been returned to the Cemetery Department and will be used to duplicate other pillars.

Restoring: The bell tower (top photo) was removed several years ago and replaced by another roof (bottom). The city hopes to reconstruct the tower.

The bottom of the tower was originally used as office space. It was restored in 1989 and will be used as a cemetery museum, Kendall said.

Larger contributions to the Cemetery Department are $6,000 from the Oakley Foundation.

$5,000 from the Veterans of Foreign Wars, $2,000 from Pitman-Moore Inc., $1,000 from First National Benson Trust and $750 from Western Tar. About a dozen other contributions from local businesses and individuals each total $500.

The department also is selling signed and numbered prints by Omer "Salty" Seamon ranging from $50 to $100 to raise funds for the restoration project.

Cemetery's bell tower closer to renovation

 Cemeteries (WV) - Highland Lawn*

Highland Lawn Cemetery at 4520 Wabash Ave. has received a $2,000 donation from Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 972 for a cemetery improvement project, Superintendent Rita Kendall said Wednesday.

Restoration of the cemetery's bell tower at the front entrance is progressing satisfactorily, but additional funding is still needed, she said.

"We have a low bid of $98,000 from a local contractor and with the latest donation have about $36,000 toward our goal," Kendall said.

Upon completion, the tower will have its original stone work restored.

Constructed in 1884, the foundation was limestone and Bedford stone was used for the 60-foot tower.

Four columns which have deteriorated over the years will be replaced at the top of the tower, Kendall said.

Post 972 also donated $3,000 for the tower in 1988, and another $2,000 for the Highland Lawn Chapel in 1986.

Renovation of the chapel was finished in March 1988 at a cost of $65,000.

Both the cemetery's chapel and bell tower have been accepted for national registry status.

Cemetery wants to restore tower

Cemeteries (WV) - Highland Lawn

The city Cemetery Department is raising money to restore the bell tower at Highland Lawn Cemetery.

"This bell tower has long been a Terre Haute landmark," said Rita Kendall, assistant superintendent of city cemeteries. She said the m12.02 primary money maker in the project is the sale of 500 Omer D. "Salty" Seamon prints of the Highland Lawn Cemetery gateway entrance with its bell tower.

Kendall said there are only four of 10 artist copies of the scene left and they are selling for $100 apiece. The remaining 490 prints — autographed as are all the others — sell for $50 each.

The restoration project will consist of putting the original four points on top of four columns on the bell tower. Kendall said the four points have been returned after being taken off the bell tower in

Is JUL 27 1988
1977. Two of the four columns have also been recovered.

"If anyone has the other two columns we'd appreciate getting them back," Kendall said.

Kendall said the bell no longer works in the tower, but that it could be fixed or possibly taken out and displayed at the cemetery.

An aluminum cap is currently on top of the bell tower.

WORLD OF HISTORY LIES UNDER GROUND

RESTING IN PEACE

Tours are available at Terre Haute's Highland Lawn Cemetery

By TAMMY AYER
TRIBUNE STAR

With her hands cupped above her eyes to stop the strong afternoon sunlight, Tierra Caloway peered into the Highland Lawn Cemetery mausoleum of the Chapman J. Root family, where six bodies lay encased in pale gray marble.

"Oooooo," the 10-year-old said as she scanned the tiny room, lit only by the small openings in the lacy design of the mausoleum's slender bronze doors and a stained-glass window showing a bundle of wheat and a scythe.

Suddenly turning and shaking her hands, Caloway jogged down the steps to where her classmates sat on the grass in front of Roxe Anne Kesner, cemetery manager for Highland Lawn and Terre Haute's other city cemetery, Woodlawn.

As the leader of this tour of third-graders from Davis Park Elementary School, Kesner already had a good idea of what to expect from the children — and the adults. Having led cemetery tours for all kinds of groups since 1996, Kesner has learned much about human attitudes toward death.

Located on the east edge of the city along U.S. 40, Highland Lawn is the second-largest cemetery in Indiana. On its 139 acres, more than 60,000 people lay under monuments and markers and capstones, which range from barely there squares to stones paired to resemble a bed, towering obelisks, life-size angels and a mausoleum that holds 16 bodies.

Like those stones of all shapes and sizes, the lives of those they mark run the gamut from poor and ordinary to amazingly wealthy and famous. Among them are Dr. Frank Widemann, inventor of the X-ray machine; world-famous Socialist and labor leader Eugene V. Debs; Ellen Church Marshall, creator of the stewardess program; national and Civil War leaders and a trio of gypsies killed in a domestic dispute in 1914.

Usually, Kesner is in the front office of the cemetery, a historic structure that once served as a waiting station for the interurban railroad. There, among massive maps and stacks of aged record books, she works alongside cemetery superintendent Bob Francis, assistant clerk Kathy Johnson and a sleepy tortoiseshell cat named Digger.

But when the spring weather warms up and the phone calls requesting tours start coming, she gladly leaves the office to lead relaxing and informative walks within this park of stone.

"You're going to see all kinds of different monuments here — just beautiful pieces of art," Kesner tells the Davis Park students.

FORMERLY A PIG FARM

Considered an outstanding example of late 19th century Romantic (Victorian) landscape design, Highland Lawn boasts a spot on the National Register of Historic Places. Its extensive groups of trees and shrubs, meandering paths and carefully placed ponds and vistas are home to the rugged chapel built in 1893, a prime example of Richardsonian Romanesque architecture.

Before the city bought the property in 1884, the scene was much different. Then, the property was a pig farm owned by the Jenks family, Kesner said.

Already the owner of 40-acre Woodlawn Cemetery, which opened in 1835 just east of the Wabash River, the city studied its expanding boundaries and shrinking burial space and purchased the swath of gently hilled farm land. On Oct. 29, 1884, the first person was buried in Highland Lawn — Samantha McPherson, who died at age 30 of typhoid fever.

Since then, many people have made the final journey past the massive gateway arch and bell tower, and Kesner knows many of their stories.

The Lebanon, Ind., native never planned to work in a cemetery. She came to the Wabash Valley in 1977 to attend Indiana State University, following a path already made by then-boyfriend Phil. She left school, married Phil and began working as a homemaker and mother and later for the Vigo County Federal Credit Union before she started working for the cemetery in March 1994.

Handed the tour information the next month, Kesner, 41, eased into the tour routine in a transition oiled by her love of history and the history lessons that cemeteries offer.

"My husband and I are both history buffs," said the mother of two teens. "I love to go to old cemeteries and read what's on the stones. I do that on vacation."

Every year, as the winter moves into spring, Kesner knows the calls for tours will start coming. When the buses and cars start arriving, she tucks her navy-blue folder filled with background information under her arm and heads out. She's talked to as many as 115 third-graders at once.

Most tours last about an hour, though some involving groups of adults can take up to an hour and a half.

"That's a really good one, when I get all the good stuff in," Kesner noted.

CEMETERY INFORMATION

Highland Lawn Cemetery is open from sunup to sundown. For more information on the cemetery or to arrange a group tour, call Roxe Anne Kesner at (812) 877-2531. Kesner is also working on a walking tour that visitors can take on their own.

Though the tours have made her well-versed on many of the more famous people at Highland Lawn, sometimes she comes across a certain name that seems to tug at her memory or a stone that is particularly intriguing, and the research begins anew.

"I was out here walking around one time and I found a stone that has the corner of a cabin, a shock of corn, a raccoon and a squirrel. It just makes you wonder," Kesner said. "I've never been able to go out and find it since."

DIFFERENT AGES, DIFFERENT ATTITUDES

As the Davis Park students in Susan Pickard's class touched the granite globe that marks Widemann's grave — the globe representing Widemann's worldwide quest for knowledge, notes Kesner — the questions began. They continued as the group of 22 children and the teacher, teacher's aide and student teacher move to the Root mausoleum, where the walking stopped for a few moments and the students settled cross-legged on the grass.

"How much does it cost to get buried here?" asked Chuck Tidd. Kesner told the children that costs to buy the ground start at around $450, and a chapel service costs $475, while a graveside service costs $525.

Other children had already asked about the 92-inch-high bronze elk that marks property owned by Elks Lodge 86, quizzed Kesner on the height of the towering obelisk that marks the family plot of Demas Deming, the namesake of Deming Park; and pointed at a mausoleum and asked what it was — before whispering that it "looked like a bathroom" and dissolving into giggles.

Kesner told the students that the Root mausoleum they sat near belonged to the family of the man whose factory, the Root Glass Co., developed and produced the first Coca-Cola bottle.

That got several heads nodding as teachers pointed out that the youths had just studied Root's company.

But the real attention-getter was hearing one of Terre Haute's most famous legends — that of Stiffy Green, subject of many an after-hours visit by curious and often high-school-age locals.

After the youths and teachers peered into the John G. Heintl mausoleum, its door handles linked by a pale green velvet ribbon, Kesner climbed the steps and stood at the entrance.

"In the early 1900s, Mr. Heintl acquired a bulldog. The two became loyal companions. In 1921, Mr. Heintl died," Kesner intoned. "Stiffy Green attended the funeral and moved on to the mausoleum, where he stood guard at the door, snapping at anyone who came near. Mrs. Heintl came to take him home, and he came right back.

"One day, Mrs. Heintl came to the mausoleum, and he had died. Since he had been so loyal, she had him stuffed and placed in the mausoleum with his master."

In 1985, due to recurring vandalism, the cemetery moved Stiffy Green to the Vigo County Historical Museum. The children had seen the statue in their visit to the museum earlier in the day, Pickard noted.

So, was Stiffy Green real, or just a myth? Kesner asked. The reaction was immediate.

"Real!" several children shouted. "He growled at me!" one declared. "He blinked!" another shrieked.

Not so, Kesner said. Stiffy Green was a stone statue that came from the front porch of the Heintl home.

The children laughed and chattered about the tale. Still, some had been fearful of visiting the cemetery, and some had cried before the visit, Pickard said.

"Some are scared. A lot of them, this is the first time they've ever been here," Kesner said. "And they notice when it's a young child."

That also goes for adults, who generally have just one question in mind — what did this person do and how did he or she do it? How did he get that power? How did she write those poems?

"I was kinda nervous — I didn't think it was a very good idea," said student teacher Terri Hammond of the idea of visiting Highland Lawn. "But now, I think it's neat. I liked her version of Stiffy Green."

ALL KINDS OF STORIES

After the children and teachers boarded the bus back to school, Kesner walked among the stones, musing on their inscriptions and admiring their artistry. She pointed out several toga-draped women, some sitting with a head upon a hand, some standing and holding a wreath in a hand clutched to the heart or draped to the side.

"This is my favorite one,"

Kesner said as she stood near the monument of Max Ehrmann. Ehrmann, author of "Desiderata" and "The Prayer," among other poems, lay near a life-size angel, its graceful arms outstretched with palms up, a batch of lilies as its bare feet.

Kesner pointed out the grave of John Lennon — John E. Lennon, that is. She told the story of the three small red granite stones of Socca Riska, Bob Riska and Joe Riska, the gypsies who were shot to death in West Terre Haute on May 23, 1914, by John Demetro. He was the common-law husband of Socca Riska and the father-in-law of Bob Riska; Demetro also killed his son-in-law's father, Joe Riska.

Gypsies still visit those graves to dance and sing and drink. Other visitors will drink a beer at a grave, sometimes leaving a full or half-full can on the stone. Some have left coins on Debs' plain stone; elsewhere, some leave pictures and some leave Mylar balloons, their silvery finish glimmering in the sunlight.

No matter how famous or how obscure, every life has its own story. Kesner knows many of those stories well, and she never tires of passing them on.

"You don't have to go to Indianapolis, you don't have to go to Chicago, you don't have to go to New York to learn about famous people," Kesner said. "People did famous and interesting things right here."
